APRIL SALE

Bought your pillows & comforters elsewhere? Guaranteed you overpaid!!!

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

Chicken Mystery

Two Chickens, Survivor And A CBS Mystery Suitable For Sixty Minutes

By Dan Rattiner

About a month ago, on the top rated CBS television show Survivor, a large pig was inserted into the island environment where the contestants live. This pig was stabbed to death and eaten, an act which outraged members of animal right groups in America but, from another perspective, brought lots of publicity to the show, surely pleasing the executives at Black Rock, which is the knickname of the CBS headquarters skyscraper on Sixth Avenue in Manhattan.

I am not a regular viewer of this show, but among other things, I am told, there was a young woman contestant who is a vegetarian who also protested the pig incident quite vigorously, and who may have raised issues about suing CBS if anything like that ever happened again since she was on the island and by contract was stuck there and might incur pain and suffering if anything like that were to ever happen again.

One week later, and this was apparently unrelated, she was voted off the island.

What follows is a sequence of events here in Southampton which reminds me of the time when several police cars turned on spotlights one night and caught two burglars about to go through the window of a wealthy estate home in Southampton. This time, however, the perpetrators, or in this case about to be perpetrators, were apparently CBS executives trying to avoid an expensive lawsuit. It is the only explanation for the sequence of events that follow that makes any sense.

It happened on the back road known as Major's Path in the rural North Sea section of Southampton. A large black limousine, dust trailing behind, comes up the road and slows to a halt in front of North Sea Farms. The limo driver gets out, goes to the farmhouse and knocks on the door. In a few minutes, farmer Tate King Sr. emerges and, with the driver, returns to the limousine. The chauffeur opens the door, reaches in and brings out two live chickens in a cage. He hands the cage to King, gives him a receipt form, King signs it, and the chauffeur drives off.

Tate King Sr. has just received two white chickens from Manhattan. They are from CBS. The instructions, by pre-arrangement, are that he is to give them a good home. They are to have a vacation in the Hamptons, on the house, for the rest of their lives.

"They just wanted these chickens out of town," Tate told me. "They knew I had a farm."

"Did they pay you?" I asked.

"No. But I got the cage they came in. It was a brand new dog crate. My neighbor wanted one. So I sold it to him and made a few dollars. I guess you could say they paid me that."

"What was it all about?"

"It had something to do with that Survivor game and that pig. I didn't see it myself because I don't watch Survivor. But I was told about it. I think they were going to do something with these chickens."

"Could this be a joke?"

"I don't think so. The owner of the Sip 'n Soda on Hampton Road has a son who is a lawyer for CBS. That is who contacted me. They had these live chickens they had gotten at a poultry market

"This Spring, the chickens almost went to Watkins Glen," Tate said. "But it fell through."

Simon and Schuster has published Family Ties, the newest book from Lois Wyse. Wyse, who lives in East Hampton, has published sixty books, including several New York Times bestsellers. She is president of Wyse Advertising.

Local Hamptonite (and Rock Star) Sting spoke about George W. Bush and his concerns about the man at the premiere screening of his new movie When Billie Beat Bobby in LA last week. "He seems to be given his lines by other people," he said of Dubyuh. Well, it's just like the movies.

Chevy Chase of East Hampton has this favorite line he uses when serving as auctioneer at charity events. He says if he gets no bids he'll take his pants off. Then he starts to. Then he gets bids. He was at Chelsea Piers last Wednesday night to help the charity Riverkeeper, which helps clean up our rivers upstate. Many Hamptonites were in attendance, including Ethel Kennedy and of course Bobby Jr. who is often a visitor out here and who heads up Riverkeeper. $2.5 million was raised. And Chevy kept his pants on.

Violinist Itzhak Perlman, who, along with his wife Toby, is on Shelter Island during the summer running their music school, had, in many ways, his finest hours this past month. He was the featured performer at the Academy Awards and then, two weeks later, did the honors playing the Star Spangled Banner for the Mets opener at Shea Stadium.

A wonderful party for Don Hewitt of Mecox, celebrating his new book Tell Me a Story: 50 Years and 60 Minutes in Television at the Museum of Television & Radio. Thrown by Tina Brown, another Hamptonite, of TALK magazine, many local literary folk were in attendance including Walter Isaacson, Paula Zahn, Barbara Walters and Steve Brill.

CORRECTION:

In our review last week of Stages' production of Peter Pan, our reviewer made the awful faux pas of incorrectly attributing one of the pivotal roles in the play. The part of Wendy was very capably played by Caitlyn Amanda, who has graced many a Stages' production. Our most embarrassed apologies to Ms. Amanda.

Meet Vincent Galluccio. Just as a Stradivarius needs a gifted musician to make it truly sing, so too does a fine wine require a passionate presence to nudge its quality from merely excellent to exceptional.

At Galluccio Estate Vineyards, Vince is creating a special environment. One that has paid homage to the 16 year legacy of the award-winning Gristina vineyard while ushering in a new era of unprecedented vitality and sophistication to the Long Island North Fork wine growing region.

So, we hope the next time you're looking for something with a tantalizingly robust body and an excellent nose, you'll think of our Vince...so to speak.

in Harlem. There had been a change of plans. Near as I can figure they had planned to send the chickens to the island — it's off Australia — and then they changed their minds. They wanted to make sure the chickens had a good home. I raise chickens. I could give them a good home."

"And you have?"

"I have. I put them in an isolated coop so there'd be no trouble with the other chickens."

"Good feed, fresh air."

Tate laughed. "A whole lot better than the City. They called a couple of times to see how they were doing. But you know, they're chickens. One of them had a crooked beak. Died. These things happen. The other one is okay."

"How long do chicken's live?"

"Well these are meat chickens, not laying chickens. Laying chickens last about fourteen months, then you replace them. With meat chickens, they can live up to two years, though the meat gets kind of tough after about six months."

"How long have you had them?"

"I got them last May. About a year."

I thought about this. Survivor, I realized, is videoed in advance. Then everybody is sworn to secrecy. It was a time warp, but now Tate had been released from his vow of silence.

"This thing is so bizarre," Tate said.

Tate and I spent the next ten minutes trying to piece this thing together. And here is what we have come up with.

After the pig incident, the Survivor producers had bad intentions for these two chickens, that seems clear enough. But why had they purchased them here? Why not just buy them in Australia. Answer? The producers of the show wanted to SEE the chickens. Hold a chicken audition. (Nothing Goes to the Island Without Us Seeing It First.) So they bought them in Harlem. And then – there must be a ferry of supply planes going back and forth between JFK and the Island – sent them Down Under. Then comes the threat of a law suit. And the settlement is to agree to pamper these chickens for the rest of their lives in exchange for no lawsuit. Makes perfect sense.

"I said why don't you just wring their necks and be done with it?", Tate said. "And they said no, no, we have to take care of these particular chickens."

Send them out for a lifetime vacation in the Hamptons.

"This spring, the chickens almost went to Watkins Glen," Tate said. "But it fell through."

"How did that happen?"

"This man called me up, he knew about them so I guess he was from CBS, and he asked if he could take them off my hands and give them to his girlfriend. She has a farm in Watkins Glen. I said sure. I've got a new shipment of pullets coming in May. I'll give her these two if that's what she wants. He said she would give me a call. But she never did."

"Sounds odd."

"He told me she was a bartender in Rockville Center on the weekends. I don't know.

"You know, one time, just this past summer, I rented a rooster to a man who was giving a party for his girlfriend. It was her birthday or something. He wanted to know if I could put the rooster on a leash. I said they don't go on leashes. But I could deliver him in a cage."

"What was THAT all about?"

"The girlfriend just loved roosters. She had roosters on glasses, roosters on pot holders and so forth. When I went back to pick up the rooster, the man told me everybody liked him so much they named him Tate. So now I have a rooster named after me and a chocolate chip cookie named after me."

You can get Tate Cookies, fresh baked, in specialty stores around the Hamptons, or at the bakery on North Sea Road. Kathleen King, who bakes the cookies and founded the company, is Tate's daughter. Her company used to make Kathleen's Cookies. But she sold the brand, and now she makes them even better and markets them as Tate's Cookies after her dad. Tate is short for Tater which is short for Potato.

The North Sea Farms raises all sorts of things. Their motto, written on Mr. King's business card, is "A Small Farm With A Little Bit Of Everything."

Stop by and talk to Tate. If you can shed some more light on this chicken business, let me know. •

Name That Fog

Why Is It That Only Hurricanes And Typhoons Are Given Names?

By Dan Rattiner

Hurricane Andrew swept across Florida in 1994. Hurricane Diane smacked into the Hamptons in the summer of 1985 cutting power for two weeks.

I think it is a good thing that we give our Hurricanes names. It gives us something to relate to. It gives each hurricane a personality. However, why just hurricanes?

Late last summer I came out of the movie theatre after seeing The Perfect Storm and wondered, considering the enormity of it, why I had never heard of this storm before. It was a real storm. It occurred in 1991, twenty years after the weather bureau began naming storms. And it was near to us, in the North Atlantic just beyond the Grand Banks, where many of the sportfishing boats out of Montauk go every day to fish. In fact, a local eastern Long Island man died during this storm. He was Rick Smith, the trained parajumper on board Jolly 110, the helicopter that crashed into the sea during the failed attempt to rescue the men on the doomed fishing boat. He and the helicopter, and the C-130 refueling plane had come from a rescue wing at the airfield in Westhampton.

"It wasn't a hurricane," Cathie said.

"But it was the worst storm ever. Sixty and seventy foot waves. Three storms merging to make one mega-storm."

"They only name hurricanes," Cathie said.

Well hurricanes in the Atlantic and typhoons in the Pacific. They name typhoons.

"Even if it wasn't a hurricane they should have given it a name."

I thought about this lack of names again when the big winter blizzard hit these parts in early March. Rearing up as the combination of two fronts, it missed us all together at first, then came back and bit us in the behind two days later, dropping fourteen inches of snow on the Hamptons and North Fork. It was not the biggest and worst thing we've ever had, but it certainly was big enough to have a name. But there was none. And so it will not be remembered.

Name them after Santa's reindeer. Last March's bite you in the butt blizzard could have been Blizzard Prancer.

I thought about this once again early this morning — which finally motivated me to write this article — when one of our three dogs, a giant Great Dane named Rudy, came up on our bed, licked and sniffed us in the face, and then, from the other end, let out a boomer. Great Danes are 180-pound dogs and a Great Dane letting a boomer is cause for alarm, or certainly, as Cathie suggested, the pulling up of the blanket over our heads until the smoke clears.

"This fart should have a name," I told Cathie in the darkness under the covers.

"Fart Ferdinand."

"Fart Frieda. It should be given a name that begins with F. Freddie. Fergy. Call the Weather Channel."

I very often watch the Weather Channel. There could be just one cloud in the sky, a small one, scudding out toward the Northwest and on the Weather Channel they show the radar and there it is. Our cloud. They know EVERYTHING on the weather channel. And they should start naming them.

Fogs and mists should have names. Names of cats arriving on little cat feet.

Why shouldn't heat waves have names? The temperature goes up to 110 and everybody is lying around panting. On the weather channel, there is this bright pink oval marking the heat wave, slowly moving east. They should name big, special heatwaves after sultry, bombshell Hollywood actresses. Lola or Brigitte or Suzanne.

Remember Heat Wave Suzanne? Late summer of 2004. I remember it well.

They should name those little clouds that go scudding past. After the angels.

They should name nor'easters after the Queens and Kings of England.

They should name big thunder and lightning storms from heaven after the names of the popes.

And they should name blizzards. Name them after Santa's reindeer. Last March's bite you in the butt blizzard could have been Blizzard Prancer. The first of the new breed.

And let us not forget our fine tail wagging friends. Last Friday we survived Dog Fart Freddie. •

Cloning

What If Dolly The Sheep's Clone Stops Looking Like Dolly Someday?

By Dan Rattiner

I've been reading the papers and watching the news on TV for two years now and I still don't quite get this business they call cloning. I'll explain.

Four years ago, in Scotland, a veterinarian by the name of Bordon, I think, held a press conference to announce that this sheep he had, "Dolly," had been cloned from another sheep. Apparently sex had not been involved. And there they were, two sheep who looked exactly alike.

What I couldn't understand at the time, and still don't, is whether Dolly grew from being a little tiny baby sheep into a full blown adult sheep after they rubbed two parts of the old sheep together – they said any parts would do, the eyeball, the tongue, the earlobe etc. – or if Dolly came onto this earth full blown, so to speak, and there she was, trotted out and on display from the get go.

My suspicions about this involved the fact that if Dolly had grown from being a baby, why had they waited so long to introduce her? I mean the successful cloning, and I don't want to go into this in detail, if it had happened a year earlier, should have resulted in Dr. Bordon trotting her out on shaky legs and saying "see? We have successfully cloned this baby sheep. In a year she will grow up to be the spitting image of who we cloned her from who is this adult sheep over here."

But they didn't.

And so Dolly either popped out, wherever she popped out from – the oven? – and inflated to an immediate adult size, and then Dr. Bordon trotted her out, her hoofs tap tapping on the linoleum of the laboratory press conference room, or else Dolly is a fraud.

On the other hand, since that time, they've cloned, or they say they have cloned, all sorts of animals and plants. They've cloned chickens. They've cloned ducks. And along the way, there have been religious leaders who say this is very much against God's will, and there has been great fear they might clone a human, which, apparently, would be a major sin, though secretly there are rumors that there are already scientists who have done it. (And I think I have met them.)

> They've cloned tomatoes. I see them every day in... the supermarket. They are little clusters of exactly the same size... They are scary.

I have noticed, by the way, that whatever cloning is, scientists have so far not attempted to clone anything larger than themselves. It's a tricky business apparently. You don't want two identical nine foot Alaskan polar bears running angrily around the laboratory smashing up the test tubes.

They've cloned tomatoes. I see them every day in the fresh vegetable section of the supermarket. They are little clusters of exactly the same size perfect red ball tomatoes perched on exactly the same size green stalks with exactly the same size green leaves on them as all the other clusters in the bin. They are scary. I buy them. They are good.

They've cloned corn. The other day, they pulled all this genetically altered corn off the shelves because it was supposed to only have been sold to farmers as pig feed. And instead they were selling it to you and me. It's not okay to eat this corn. But it's okay to eat the pigs who eat the corn. Who makes these rules?

Last year, they decoded the human genome, whatever that is. Whatever it is, we have about two billion of them and they are all twisted together like those lanyards kids make at summer camp. The result is that we can now get any two genomes, tell them to make a person, and they will go ahead and do so. On its twenty-first birthday, they can trot that person out for a press conference, its hoofs clattering on the linoleum in front of the photographers. But I'll be retired by then.

About a month before they decoded the human genome, when they were down to counting their last ten million or so, some scientists, just to show how easy this whole thing is, instructed two genomes to make a field mouse. There were photos of it sniffing around inside its cage. Just something they knocked out while closing in on the Big Kahuna.

What I really think is that all this is a lot of baloney. Any day now, Dolly will start looking not quite exactly like the other Dolly. Scientists will race around and say just look what the environment has done. They used to be identical. Now they are not. Right.

I know the real way to make a person. And so do you. Let's go have a drink. •

"LOOSE LIPS SINK SHIPS" IN SAG HARBOR

By Dan Rattiner

"Loose Lips Sink Ships" was the order of the day during World War II. Spies could be anywhere. Say something you shouldn't and a ship gets torpedoed. You could get put in jail during World War II for saying things you shouldn't.

What exactly goes on in Sag Harbor that is so secret is a puzzle to this writer, but whatever it is, it's been no secret that the Sag Harbor Village Board wants to severely punish any of its members who might say what they shouldn't. Put the perpetrator in jail, for instance. They've been working on this, both in executive session and in open session, for months.

An executive session, by the way, is a meeting of the Village Board in secret, as opposed to an open session, where the meeting takes place and the doors are opened to the public. There's never been a problem with what goes on in public. That's public. When they get together as executives, however, which is I guess what they are in executive session, is where they've had the problems.

"I've been out on the street the day after a supposedly secret executive session," one board member, who shall remain nameless, said. "And people right there on the street are talking about what we were saying the night before. Somebody is leaking. This can't continue."

At an open session one month ago, the Village put forward a bill that would punish any of them caught leaking with a $250 fine or 15 days in jail. Apparently, they'd come up with this in executive session. A bad idea, self-flagelation. And who would vote for it?

"You can't put yourselves in jail," somebody noted: "Who'd run the Village?"

Then this past Tuesday, again in open session, they decided to give up on the idea of putting themselves in jail and instead considered a proposal to punish leakers by kicking them off the board.

Turns out this was a bad idea too. You can kick an elected Trustee off a Village Board for a number of things — conviction of a felony, dereliction of duty, moral turpitude and one or two others — but not for talking. Talking is what elected officials are SUPPOSED to do. That's why we elect them.

Furthermore, there was something else wrong with the amended proposal. There are only certain things talked about in executive session that are protected conversation. Talk about raises for example. Or talk about an upcoming real estate transaction with a negotiating position.

But talk about whether a speed limit sign should be put up or down is not protected. Also not protected are dumb conversations a Board might have with itself. Yet this revised proposal was worded to protect ALL executive conversations. The proposal, if made into law, would be thrown out at its first challenge — completely unconstitutional, according to a statement from an attorney at the State Board of Elections.

And so, this board, having learned of the further error of its ways in last Tuesday's open session, has ordered a retreat to a future executive session to reconsider once again how to keep what was said in the executive sessions from being out on the street the next day.

Take offenders over the knee of the accusers and give them a terrible spanking. Tie their thumbs together for an hour. Put them in the Stocks overnight. Make them try to drink water and sing at the same time. Those are okay punishments.

Question: if what goes on in executive session is secret, how can anybody testify that somebody in the executive session said something that is now being illegally revealed? A conundrum.

Answer: Does a ship have to be torpedoed in the Harbor?

Another answer: If a tree falls on the Village Board, will anybody hear it? •

Alger

A Strange Booksigning At The Yale Club Gets It All Wrong

By Dan Rattiner

There is going to be a speech and book signing at the Yale Club in Manhattan on April 18. Speaking will be Tony Hiss, sometimes of East Hampton, who is 58, a graduate of Harvard, and the son of Alger Hiss, a man who thought he took one of this country's great political secrets with him to the grave when he died in East Hampton in 1995. His son's book is entitled The View From Alger's Window. And rarely has an event, or a book, or the premise of a book, or a book signing been more botched up.

Probably the least of it is the announcement in the Yale University Newsletter about the upcoming book signing. It says Tony Hiss will be speaking at the club to "celebrate the 15th anniversary of his father's incarceration." How one can celebrate an incarceration is a wonder. And since Alger Hiss was incarcerated in 1951, the anniversary is the 50th, not the 15th.

The secret that Alger Hiss kept for 50 years involved whether he had been a spy for the Russians or not. Hiss claimed he was not a spy. A bunch of low lifes that included a hard drinking Time magazine reporter and a megalomaniac senator named Joe McCarthy framed him. Thus was a promising political career – Hiss had been Under-Secretary of State before the age of 40 and was very highly thought of – ruined. He was fired from his job and put on trial, accused of things that could have sent him to the electric chair, and though acquitted, convicted of a lesser charge – lying to Congress about whether he knew somebody or not – that sent him to jail for ten years.

...in 1996, Alger Hiss died, secure in the knowledge that he had been cleared... however, the real truth came out.

Interestingly, the question of Alger Hiss's guilt subsequently became as important a question as Who Killed Jimmy Hoffa or What is the Identity of Deep Throat, the man who informed on President Nixon, because all three were for a long time unsolved – the two above remain unsolved – and all three had national political ramifications. Alger Hiss as a young man was strikingly handsome, well schooled, from the right family, polite and well mannered and if it could be shown that he was a spy then, well, anybody could be a spy.

Under these circumstances, I was startled to learn, about ten years ago, that Alger Hiss and his wife were living quietly on a small street in East Hampton, Osborne Lane, just a short walk to town and about a three minute drive from where I lived. Hiss had been on Osborne Lane for more than a decade, retired from public life, and perhaps he would make a good interview for Dan's Papers.

He did. I went to see him, and was charmed by him, just like almost everybody else in town.

He was elderly by this time, in his eighties, but he got around okay, and he was cheerful and interested to talk to me. He asked about the paper which he said he had had read to him for years. (His eyesight was failing. People in town took shifts coming over to read to him.) He freely and without undue emotion told me he had been wrongly accused and had gone to jail because of the tenor of the times – it was a fearful time – and he didn't blame anybody, though he was disappointed that his life had turned out the way it did.

Before he and his wife had retired to East Hampton, he had worked for twenty-five years for a stationery manufacturing business in New Jersey, going around in a territory, selling what his employers manufactured and taking orders. He had had a fine life after all.

I left Alger Hiss' house feeling not a bit sorry for the man, since he surely did not feel sorry for himself, but just a bit angered, probably on his behalf, that he had been caught up in the fears of his time. I did indeed think he would have made a great senator or congressman. He sort of reminded me of our longtime senator, Daniel Moynihan.

About two years after this, in 1992, a press conference was held that for Alger was nothing short of a triumph. Alger had asked his son Tony, who had long defended him, to go to Russia and have some former Soviet General look into the old files of the now defunct KGB to say once and for all whether Alger was a spy or not. Alger was sure he knew the answer. And now, six months after Tony had gone, they had this letter from the general. Alger Hiss was not a spy. And they had the papers to prove it. Tony said his father was vindicated which he knew all along. And he would write a book about it.

Four years after that, at the age of 92, Alger Hiss died of old age. He died secure in the knowledge that he had been cleared of all charges and that now everybody knew the truth.

In 1997, however, the real truth came out, and it was ugly. The Soviet General, indeed, had looked in some files at the K. G. B. and Alger was nowhere named. But there were other files he had not looked through. And there were recently released American documents, transcriptions of coded messages, sent from Moscow to some of their American agents during the 1930s and 1940s. One of them was to Alger Hiss, chastising him for taking the risk, unauthorized, of attempting to recruit an American official into a Soviet spy ring. And there were other incriminating communications to Mr. Hiss.

As this information surfaced, and was released in magazine articles around the country, one staunch supporter of Alger Hiss, a professor of history at Hamilton College named Maurice Isserman, said, "Let's face it, the debate about Alger Hiss just ended."

Hiss was a spy.

It takes a long time to write a book. And when I guess it is done, it is done. And so, there will be, this April 18, a speech made by Tony Hiss to mark the publication of his new hard cover book The View From Alger's Window, about Tony's father Alger Hiss, "one of the most famous victims of the Cold War witch-hunts." It will celebrate the 15th anniversary of his incarceration. So be it. •

Still Missing

TwoWeeks After The Search Is Officially Called Off, A Family Still Hopes

By Susan Simm

Tragedy has a way of creating miracles. With the loss of one thing, we often find another. And we are almost always surprised by what we find.

It is Saturday, April 7. Down by the water, the sky is overcast and it is beginning to rain. The air is still damp and cold. There on the grass at the edge of the bulkhead, overlooking Tiana Bay, are the remains of a flare shot up the night the search began. No trace of Marc Legotti, a 16-year old Hampton Bays resident who was last seen paddling a rowboat across the bay on the evening of March 10, has been found. Still, Marc's family and friends haven't given up hope of achieving closure and resuming their lives.

"This is a community, not a town full of strangers. You just don't know that until something like this happens," said Marc's mother, Susann Legotti-Ashraf.

Anonymity can be hard to achieve in small town life, but Susann has been overwhelmed by the often-anonymous support of those in her community and beyond.

"Even though they called off the search a week ago Monday, a man came at the end of the week from Philadelphia with $30,000 worth of sonar equipment and they covered about 50 miles. I have no idea who he is," said Susann. "I have to thank just hundreds of nameless, faceless people that have been involved with this search. Strangers walking along the shore looking for Marc have come up and hugged me. This whole experience has been an amazing thing."

It is sometimes said that death is hardest on those it leaves behind. Surely, the death of a child is the hardest one to bear, but Susann is buoyed by her faith. She believes that Marc must have accomplished what he was meant to during his 16 years.

> "No matter how hard you try, you can't watch them every minute. There's always a good choice and a bad one. And if they make the bad one..."

"You know that commercial where a woman dies at 46 and a man says, 'I never knew that 23 was middle age?' Marc's middle age was eight. There are some things we just can't know."

During the days following the accident, 20-30 teenagers would gather at Marc's house in the evening, swapping stories about a boy who'd "just give you a smile that made you fall in love with him." Neighbors and others in the community supplied food for the family and gathering kids.

Susann's greatest hope is that what happened teaches these teenagers that they are not immortal. "No matter how hard you try, you can't watch them every minute. There's always a good choice and a bad choice. And if they make the bad one...I just honestly believe that it was his time."

Despite swimming certificates (Marc was certified by the Red Cross) the current and hypothermia can take your life in no time. Susann hopes that waterfront homeowners will either chain small boats to bulkheads or remove them for the winter. They are such temptations to kids.

At sunrise the day after Marc was missing, a helicopter came back after refueling in Cape Cod. Another helicopter whirrs in the distance today as we sit at Susann's kitchen table.

"Every time I hear that sound..." she trails off. On the table between us sits a black and white photo of Marc and K.T. They are horsing around like typical teenagers. It is significant only because it is the last photo Susann ever took of

Marc. She just wanted to use up the roll of film.

Marc, along with his friend and football teammate Kenneth "K.T." Tofty, were last seen together rowing a leaky boat which they had found on shore at about 5 p.m. According to K.T., they crossed the mouth of Tiana Bay successfully and then, after reaching the other side, they rested a while (one hour, according to one report). They then decided to try and round the Rampasture peninsula but ended up taking on so much water that they were forced to capsize the boat in an effort to float on top of it. When this failed, they swam for shore, but they became separated as they swam. K.T., the only witness, reached land at the bulkheaded property of an East Quogue resident. He was suffering from severe hypothermia, with no pulse below the waist. Marc is still missing.

The East Moriches Coast Guard believes that Marc's body is still somewhere in the bay, while the Shinnecock Coast Guard seems to think that the body could have washed out to sea. The bay constables agree with East Moriches. Susann is surprised that, in a relatively small area of the bay where Marc was last seen by K.T., no one has been able to find Marc.

"I don't like the convenience of the word 'ocean;' that it can just be passed off that that is where he must have ended up."

Many unanswered questions remain. After their first landfall, the boys must have been suffering from some degree of hypothermia. Why didn't they walk to a friend's house close by instead of trying to cross the open bay? Why did they "rest" for so long, one hour by one account, before getting back in the boat? How did K.T. manage to climb the stairs up the bulkhead to the East Quogue house (at least 12 feet tall) after swimming in 38-degree water with such severe hypothermia? Susann finds it hard to believe that Marc would have gotten back in the boat the second time, but other than K.T., there are no witnesses.

"We are going fully on the faith of K.T. that Marc was back in the boat with him. He said that Marc wanted to return the boat where they had found it. I just can't see my son getting back in the boat a second time."

Susann Legotti-Ashraf is still, despite this tragedy, a warm and open person, obviously dedicated to doing her best for her children. The family has been very active on the benefit circuit here for years. Susann donates the one thing more important to Hamptons' charities than money: time.

After becoming involved with musical theatre at the age of 15, Susann's first director passed away at the age of 33, from AIDS. She then began a life-long involvement with giving whenever she can. She has an incredible photo collection of local celebrities, many taken with her children. There is one of Alec Baldwin making the sign of the cross on one knee at the Annual Artists and Writers Softball Game in East Hampton. ("He does it every time. All I have to do is scream his name and he goes right down. I'm crazy about him.") There are even a few of our esteemed Editor-in-Chief striking some ballet poses at the Farmhouse. Inspired by his recent book, Ballet Parking, no doubt.

Sarah Ashraf, Marc's "best friend" and 12-year old sister, has a photo of Billy Joel signed by the musician on her dresser. After receiving a photo of Sarah playing the piano at age four, Billy sent her this photo with an inscription saying, "Keep playing and some day you will have magic in your hands."

Hopes of finding Marc alive have all but been abandoned since the longest search, in the history of the bay, ceased Monday, March 26. But Susann still hopes the body will surface as the water warms. She is unwilling to have a memorial service just yet. A service might signal that the family has given up trying to find Marc and, Susann desperately hopes, some people will still come forward and continue to look for her lost son.

"Every day I go down to the site and, especially when it's sunny and clear, I wish more than anything that there was a helicopter up there looking down."

For the time being, everyone with homes around the bay should be aware that Marc is still in the water. Any evidence, a piece of clothing or baseball cap that might belong to him, should be reported immediately. Susann patiently waits for a day that will bring news.

"I hope it's not a teenager or woman walking with her toddler who finds him. I want it to be an official person, but, again, I just want it to be. I'm waiting for that knock at the door. It wouldn't be a dreaded knock. It would be a celebration." •

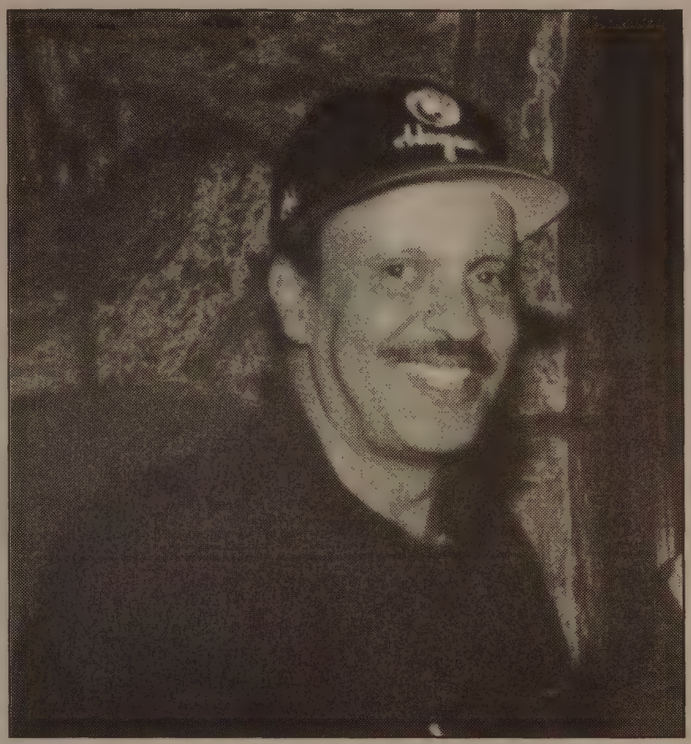
Who's Here:



John David
Golfer

By Janet Berg

John David's outward appearance may strike you by his stately, over six-foot height, and his dignified good looks; and his inner character may impress you by his warm spirit. But, there is more, still, to this 58-year-old African-American golf "phenom" from Westhampton, Long Island, than meets the eye. Perhaps, it is the 'wisdom' that he's gained along the journey of his golf career over the past 45 years.

Prior to his entitlement as Founder and President of the Multicultural Golf Association of America (formerly the Minority Golf Association of America), John encountered many lessons of life, while intermittently, making contact with that little white ball.

Although David put away his clubs on and off over a 14-year time lapse, and pursued a business career, his true dedication brought him back to his one true passion – the game of golf. Impulsively, he later used the strengths he learned from the business world to guide him through the nationwide venture of the MGAA.

Upon returning, he said, "To my surprise, I felt like Rip Van Winkle, since very little had changed to make the sport more accessible to minorities, women, senior citizens, and middle-to-low-income families."

John recalls his childhood days growing up in Westhampton Beach in the mid-fifties with his five brothers. His family life was good and he says his biggest role models were his mother and his father, and he presently lives with his 87-year-old mother. John has no children of his own, but says he gets great pleasure out of putting a golf club in the hands of kids for the first time and seeing their smiles. "I know I never will forget the time I took my first swing. There was more to the connection than the club meeting the ball."

When asked about his own golf game, David said he plays most at a zero handicap and recently played with one of his students, Colin Press, from Hampton Bays, where John scored 8 under par at the Links Executive Course.

"I feel lucky to have good memories of growing up in a small community like Westhampton Beach, where I attended school with only about 10 students in a class. I was a quiet kid, who loved the outdoors. I sang in the church choir and I did odd jobs, like babysitting, and delivering newspapers. In the spring I would work at the tennis club; but it was at the age of 13, that I recognized kids carrying bags as caddies. When I inquired at the WHB Country Club, I was told you had to be 14-years old, but since I was tall for my age, I was able to caddy."

"With caddying, the pay varied. I could make $1.50 to $3.00 a bag, depending on who it was; and a couple of years later I could make as much as $10 a round, carrying two bags twice a day, that was $20, which was a lot of money back then. I caddied for a couple of years, and I realized that I made so much money that I was right behind my schoolteacher's pay."

In 1957 he accepted the position as Pro Shop Attendant, and in 1958 when the Assistant Pro left the club to move out west, he was given responsibilities as Club Starter, to Caddy Master, to Assistant Professional.

In 1960, at the age of 18, David's golf game was first-class, and he found himself also working under the title of "Teaching Instructor," where he became absorbed by the sport, and was motivated by his successful environment.

After attending a community college for two years, as a business major, John was offered a full golf scholarship by Penn State University, where he was the "first minority" to be designated captain of a golf team at a major institution.

Although John did not experience prejudice at the WHB Country Club, these were not times you would be sitting down for breakfast at your kitchen table across from a black athlete on your cereal box. Golf was legendary for being a "white" sport, and it wasn't until 1962 that the "Caucasian Only" law was dropped by the PGA. Still, David chose not to subject himself to the indignities he realized others suffered in Pro Golf in this country. He pursued his business career in sales marketing and in real estate from the late 60's to the mid-70's, and was co-owner a travel industry business until the late 90's.

But, it was in the mid 80's that he "dusted off his clubs" and without a second thought, started helping inner-city kids, by taking them on golf outings. This escalated into taking their friends and their friend's friends. "For those kids, it was an alternative to the usual hot asphalt summers of basketball and 'trouble.' By 1990, the outings grew into the MGAA, where John said his main goal was "to put a golf club and a textbook into the hands of every underprivileged and deserving kid in the United States. And as if that were an understatement, he added, "and on this planet."

While John is the founder of the Minority Golf Association, his brother Paul David, is Co-Founder, Dick Friedson, Secretary Treasurer, and Immediate Board Members are Dave Press and Jim Carpenter.

Many children have continued with the sport and have earned golf scholarships through the program. His accomplishments through this non-profit organization have been astronomical over the past ten years, reaching upwards of 100,000 kids between the ages of 7-17 (in classes of 30 or less) at over 200 locations in 38 states (and the Caribbean). The MGAA is recognized as the first national organization to target minority youth, at risk, and inner-city children with a comprehensive golf and empowerment program. It launched the first junior golf exhibition and clinic during USGA, U.S. Open week at the 1995 U.S. Open at Shinnecock Country Club, Long Island, and assisted the Tiger Woods Foundation in presenting a Junior Golf Clinic in New York featuring "Tiger."

He said, "Our local PGA Pro is Steve Keating from Riverhead, where local headquarters are located at Cherry Creek Golf Course. We're also at Rock Hill, Mill Pond, and places like that. We bring our youth to the sport of golf rather than waiting for them to come to the game. Through the program we embrace the kids like members of the family.

The "hook" is accomplished by its introduction to the sport during celebrity USGA and PGA Tour Events by conducting exhibition and clinic events. Many times it is hi-profile with media coverage and acknowledgements from prominent people like Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, Tiger Woods, Jim McGovern, Walter Morgan and Calvin Peete. There is an 8-week follow up golf training combined with an "empowerment" program which prepares youth for academic and social success, giving them confidence and self-esteem with small goals and then allowing them to obtain larger ones.

There are many success stories, such as that of Ryan Smith and co-golfer Sean from the New York area who were selected to do commercials during the US Open. Ryan's father, Larry Robertson, has been involved with the MGAA as a volunteer, and he and his son will be doing their own celebrity golf event in Crewe,Virginia with the MGAA.

Also, this year the MGAA will be doing five events with WRCN RADIO to raise money for our local youth in Suffolk County, beginning May through October at Long Island National, the Links, Tall Grass, Cherry Creek Golf Club and closing at the Long Island National.

MGAA's proposed education program is an intensive motivational series, which includes personal leadership workshops, defining self-identity perceptions, developing your talents and abilities, planning and setting goals. While discovering feelings about yourself and how you can change those feelings and attitudes, it allows kids to define their visions and show them how to achieve it through personal development. John's motto is "Vision without action is just a dream."

I read a letter to John David from former President Bill Clinton congratulating his work with the MGAA. It said, "It is a very American idea that we meet our challenges not through big government or as isolated individuals, but as members of a true community, with all of us working together."

The small community of Westhampton Beach witnessed monumental achievements of one man from their village who has committed himself on helping troubled kids and directing them to be productive and ready citizens for this country.

Although recognized by Mayors and Ambassadors and Congress, and given the key to many cities, John David is still not recognized as an honorary lifetime member of the PGA. Yet, he was one of the very few and most likely the youngest apprentices at the time, to have full qualifications for membership. There is only a handful of lifetime honorary members of the PGA. And there is only a handful of people like John David. •

TWENTY YEARS AGO
"House Gets Stuck In Mud Trekking In Potato Fields"
February 17, 1981

At twenty minutes past eight in the morning, the authorities closed the Montauk Highway in Water Mill. The Old Bellini duck farm was about to move out and trundle down the highway headed west. There were going to be condominiums.

"It makes me sad to see this old duck farm go," one of the policemen said as he stopped traffic heading in from the East.

"Progress, I guess," another one said.

All around, bright red and yellow lights flashed on and off, warning motorists of the impending danger. The red lights were from the numerous police cars. The yellow lights were from the trucks of the Long Island Lighting Company. Many overhead wires had to be temporarily taken down to allow for the duck farm to move out. Several farmhouses were over three stories tall.

Traffic was backing up in both directions. A few motorists honked their horns impatiently, until they saw the first of the farmhouses slowly move out onto the highway. The farmhouse was on wheels, with huge steel beams acting as axles and as supports for the four bedroom building. A big truck was towing it at about three miles per hour. Workmen walked slowly along on all sides.

There were two farmhouses, actually, side by side, ready to be moved that morning, In the cold financial world of house moving, the bid for moving one of them had been won by the Kennelly Company of Southampton, while the bid for moving the other one had been won by the Brownie Company of Patchogue. House moving is big business on eastern Long Island.

"You know what this reminds me of?" one of the policemen said. "It reminds me of the Twenty Four Hour Road Race at LeMans."

A newspaper reporter with a camera stared at this policeman incredulously.

"For weeks now," the policeman continued, "these two houses have been standing by the side of the road ready to go. One says KENNELLY on it. The other says BROWNIE on it. At LeMans, all the race cars are parked in a row by the side of the road. When they fire the starting gun, all the racing drivers run out, leap in the cars and drive them onto the track and down the straight-away."

"You think they're going to RACE these farm-houses?"

"Just a thought. Well, the Kennelly house is out first."

The huge farmhouse, including two baths, a living room, kitchen, four bedrooms, attached garage and entryway, filled the entire Montauk Highway now, and like the pied piper, it led a huge crowd of onlookers slowly down the road. It headed toward the Lutheran Church. Soon it would pass the church and trundle up a small hill toward a Crown Gas Station.

Melissa and William Halsey, a young married couple in Water Mill, had bought the first of the farmhouses. Like all young married couples, they had wanted a house of their own. So they had gone out and bought one. Now they were having it delivered.

Up the hill the farmhouse went. Past the gas station, then left on Rose Hill Road. The idea was to pull in on Rose Hill Road, go down the road about a hundred feet, and then turn into a potato field being farmed by Pete Corwith. There would be a shortcut across this potato field. And then the farmhouse would arrive, after traveling about a mile through the potato field, at the Halsey building site where a concrete foundation was already waiting.

"You want to go out and BUY a house?" Bill Halsey had said to his wife about six months earlier. "Like getting a washing machine at Sears?"

"Absolutely. It beats building," Melissa replied. "Just look at the figures.

The figures are almost a hundred thousand dollars to build a house from scratch. To buy an existing farmhouse might cost twenty thousand. To move it, another eight thousand plus six thousand to LILCO for their wires. How much more could it cost to set it on its foundations and fix it up? It all made sense.

Now Bill and Melissa stood at the edge of Pete Corwith's potato field and watched as their new home slowly sank into the mud. The weather that February day, incredibly, was into the sixties. The ground had softened, and the huge tires on the tow truck were spinning. Clumps of mud and rock were sprayed all over the outside of their new living room.

Pete Corwith, the farmer, walked over.

"What happens now?" he asked Bill.

"Maybe we ought to stop it right here," Bill replied. "Want to swap some land? I'll give you the building lot on David's Lane and you give me this corner."

Bill looked down at Melissa to see if she was laughing. She wasn't.

The Kennelly people scurried about, trying to get the big twenty ton house moving again. Some of them drove off in a big truck to look for wooden boards, the kind you might put under some car wheels when you get a car stuck in the mud.

"They waited too long," Bill Halsey said. "They had hard ground all December and January. It would have been easy then. Now it is sixty degrees out and they've got problems."

"Nothing we can't take care of," one of the Kennelly men said. "We'll have it out of here."

Pete Corwith looked sadly at the long streak of mud that gouged through his potato field behind the house. The furrows of his plowed under potato crop went parallel to the road. These huge streaks went off at about a forty-five degree angle. A mess.

Now the people from the Kennelly Company were back with the wooden boards. Soon, they would have the house shored up and, as soon as the cold days returned and the ground hardened a bit, they would haul it out and on through the open field. Bill and Melissa Halsey would have their house on its foundations before potato planting season.

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

OBSERVATIONS OF AN ISLANDER # 150 EASTER, PUT A SONNET IN YOUR BONNET!

Everyone knows that the two major Christian holidays of Christmas and Easter coincide with two of the ancient European pagan holidays. Christmas and Winter Solstice, birth of the Son and birth of the sun. The pagan custom of dragging a tree into the house and decorating it to celebrate nature has been amended for modern use. The ancient pagan fertility rites of the Spring Equinox using symbols of rabbits, eggs and the May Pole have also been revised and edited to commemorate Easter and spring.

I recall Easter as a very fun time for me as a child. We got new clothes and an Easter bonnet was mandatory. After the long Church service in latin, we'd head over to my grandparents home for the traditional Easter egg hunt. Parents are generally responsible for Christmas, but Easter requires egg-dying skills, egg-hiding skills, basket decoration, candy selection and arrangement so that each basket has EGGACTLY the same number of jelly beans and marshmellow pink bunnies. The main event, the chocolate bunny, must be standing and ready to have it's head snapped off. These are tasks that require skill, dedication, patience, and an wreckless enjoyment of children, clearly a job for Grandparents.

I still haven't seen eggs dyed more beautifully than the ones done by Audrey and Ervin, my grandparents. They believed egg-dying was a lost art form. They approached it like Michaelangelo looking at a blank Sistine ceiling saying, "Okay, some carefully blended colors... I'll need a theme... let's see...oh, I know, how about Creation?"

My grandparents had those heavy ceramic coffee cups with the green rim, the diner cups. They are very heavy and always make a big lump when bounced off a loved one's head, but they're strong enough not to break. Really great cups. But their noblest service was as egg-dying cups. We'd go to their house a few days before Easter to observe and sometimes even get to help in the time honored tradition of dying the eggs.

We'd arrive on a brisk evening. A large pot of hard boiled brown eggs on the stove. My grandfather experimented and conclusively proved that light brown eggs have the best base tone for dying. On the table, a line of coffee cups, each containing liquid colors shimmering brilliantly in the bright white cups. We sat around the table and watched as eggs were gently lowered into cups and rotated at precise intervals to insure an even dye effect. The hotter the dye water, the better because hot water permeated the egg shell better and because when you lifted the egg from the cup, hot water evaporates faster, hence the egg dries faster and you can lay it down on the paper towel before your little arm drops off.

Writing on the eggs with a clear wax crayon prior to dying was also permitted, but you had to make a nice design, nothing silly. This was very serious. If you made sloppy designs, the Easter Bunny wouldn't hide that egg. The pressure was tremendous.

Come Easter we'd race to find the eggs. If it snowed or rained, the Easter Bunny very considerately hid the eggs in the house. The only negative here was if all the eggs weren't found. Although that was actually a self solving problem because a rotten egg is always found eventually.

Every child inspected the Easter basket with the eye of Sherlock Holmes. It was imperative to verify that everybody got eggactly the same candies and chocolate bunny. Even though two chocolate bunnies weigh the same according to the box, every child knows that different bunny shapes have more chocolate than others regardless of the weight in ounces. The law of physics does not cover chocolate bunnies! In this case, E = MC squared, means Easter = My Chocolate squared.

One year, Mother substitued chocolate bunnies with cake bunnies with hard candy coatings from Fritzsche's bakery in Sayville. She left them in baskets on the floor for morning discovery. But, in the night, a tiny trail of terror found the bunnies.....ants.... we woke to ant infested Easter baskets that morning. In anger and frustration Mother took all the bunnies in the backyard and stomped them into the ground. She said if we couldn't eat our bunnies, neither could the ants. If it hadn't been for Grammie and Grandpa we would have been starving and bunniless that Easter. It solidifies my theory that Easter is a grandparent affair.

Jelly beans. Jelly beans can replace a battery of psychological tests to identify core personality characteristics. In what order do you eat your jelly beans? Are you someone who lives "carpe beim" meaning "to seize the bean" and eat the best beans first? Or are you someone who has an "eating order", eating the least desirable beans first and earning the right to eat the best beans last? Do you group and organize your beans? How do you handle licorice beans? Do you eat them first or last...or do you not eat them at all? And if not, why not? Do you trade beans with siblings in an attempt to get more or your favorites, or do you humbly accept the beans that fate has put in your basket? Beanology is a unchartered territory.

The aftermath of Easter was evidenced in our lunch boxes. Every kid in school ate multicolored egg salad sandwiches for a week. Mothers vacuumed up crushed jelly beans and cellaphane grass.

So the old pagen symbols of fertility as entertainment, the eggs and the bunnies, have been converted to modern symbols of fun and love, why? Because, as it is written, "Every bunny loves somebunny sometime."

elaine k.g. benson, her daughter's column

This has been a week for friends and family. With Easter coming the kids are out of school and everyone is on the run. I'm sneaking in a quick vacation before I start back to work (with my more than full time summer job). As I mentioned last week, it was my birthday. Friends turned out in force for a great party. I was so overwhelmed that I hardly spoke three words to anyone but by the end of the night I had danced till my feet were sore and I was exhausted. The party was a little like an old television show called, This Is Your life. I saw friends from high school and friends from twenty years ago. One friend I hadn't seen in more than twenty years. Another friend showed up after more than five years. I had never met his wife and daughter. It was great to see his new family. I don't remember ever throwing myself a party here. I've spent most of my birthdays in Mexico. I wouldn't have thought of throwing a party but my friend, Gines, got excited by the idea and he is a master at throwing a good party and making everyone feel welcome.

Although I did very little of the actual inviting for the party, I did speak to a number of friends and business contacts last week. Many of my friends said they would be away for the Jewish holiday. Although I overslept on Saturday I still managed to make a Jitney to the city and head on to the Jersey Shore with my brother and his family. My nephew, Dan, was home from college for the weekend and was studying most of the day. He opened his book on advanced calculus. Although he is a freshman, this is a junior course. I didn' t understand a thing. The rest of my family assures me I'm not the only one. Dan was basically doing review. He was studying for a test.

My sister, Ginny, is a superior cook. She and her husband cooked for two days preparing all the traditional foods for a Passover dinner (Seder). They lived in Houston for many years and always invited friends and neighbors to have Seder at their house. There were times when Ginny was the only Jew at the table. It was wonderful for her to welcome friends and show them a little of a tradition with which they had no previous contact.

The story is about the emancipation of a people. It is about freedom and remembering the plight of one's ancestors. It corresponds with the Last Supper. In the same way that Christians give up something for Lent, practicing Jews give up leavened bread and all non-kosher foods during Passover.

I like traditions that make you think of the people who came before. We all try to learn from our mistakes and the mistakes of those around us. Many holidays keep the old stories alive and teach the children the oral history of the people. I love the traditional foods and songs and games. Maybe it comes from being the youngest child in my family. I always feel like a child. I want all the traditions.

My sister is seven years my senior. She played guitar, smoked menthol cigarettes, wore black all the time, hung out in coffee houses and played folk music. After dinner, at most family gatherings, we gather round the piano (or guitar) and sing show music. This past weekend was no exception. We sang until it was time to head back to the city. I sang some protest songs from the sixties that jogged my sister's memory.

I was happy to get back to the Hamptons, my cat, and all my presents still waiting to be opened. This was the best birthday I remember. I send a big thank you to everyone, especially Gines and his son Paco. This is the best place in the world, at least this week. Next week, France, anyone?

THE PRODUCERS BENEFIT SOUTHAMPTON COLLEGE

Bob Sillerman hosted a theatre benefit in support of Southampton College's Marine and Environmental Sciences Program. The evening included a buffet dinner & cocktail reception at the legendary Sardi's restaurant, NYC. Followed by a performance of The Producers, the new Mel Brooks musical based on his 1968 film, which is one of the most anticipated shows of the new season. I understand it is already sold out a year in advance and I can tell you it certainly is funny and entertaining. Mel and his beautiful and talented wife, Ann Bancroft, were on hand and the cast, including Matthew Broderick, joined us back at Sardi's after the performance. Sardi's famous caricaturists were on hand to create unique mementos of the evening and make everyone feel like a star. What a treat and all for a worthy cause.

A Not-So-Silent Auction

Who among us can't recall comedian Gilda Radner's wonderful, hilarious performances on Saturday Night Live during the 70s and 80s? Her tragic, untimely death in 1989 from ovarian cancer has left a hole in the entertainment world unfillable by anyone since. Even after her diagnosis, Gilda said (with characteristic wit and optimism) that having cancer gave her membership in an elite club she'd rather not belong to.

But Gilda has left us a legacy in addition to her artistic achievements in the form of "Gilda's Club," a nonprofit organization that she began to create as she was battling the disease that would eventually claim her life.

"Gilda and her husband at that time, Gene Wilder, decided that we should have a cancer support community here on the East Coast," said Joanna Bull, Gilda's cancer psychotherapist and founder of Gilda's Club. "She realized that it was more meaningful to meet, in a social environment, with other people going through the same thing rather than in individual sessions in isolated rooms. This realization turned her around to the point where she became really impassioned about the idea."

That idea became reality in 1995 with the opening of the flagship facility on Houston Street in NYC (there are now many scattered across the Northeast and one in London). It has become a non-medical oasis where families and friends can gather to learn how to live with cancer.

So what is the connection between this wonderful organization and the North Fork of Long Island, which lies a good hundred or so miles east of Houston Street? A silent auction being held, as we speak, at the Borghese/ Hargrave Vineyard in Cutchogue that will culminate in NYC with a wine tasting at Windows on the World to benefit Gilda's Club. Many Long Island vineyards and chefs will participate along with luminaries from Manhattan's top restaurants. The auction features an incredibly broad selection of works by East End artists, many from the North Fork and Shelter Island.

Perhaps most well-known among those artists is Ilya Kabakov, a native of the former Soviet Union who left his home country abruptly in 1989, never to return. A graduate of Moscow's Surikov Art Academy, Mr. Kabakov enjoyed a successful career as a children's' book illustrator while also creating absurdist drawings and albums of fictitious people. Mr. Kabakov currently does installations where viewers participate by walking through them and are invited to piece together clues about the lives of their make-believe inhabitants. "Viewers become collaborators," said ARTnews magazine in 1999. "[He is] one of the best-known contemporary Russian artists." Mr. Kabakov's donation to the silent auction, "Encounter with an Angel," is superbly framed, compliments of Cecily's Love Lane Gallery in Mattituck.

Betty Parsons, whose work "Low Tone" is available at the auction, is best known for her gallery (opened in 1947 in Manhattan) which immediately became the showcase of many Abstract Expressionists, such as de Kooning and Motherwell. Ms. Parsons, although renowned as an art dealer, is also an artist in her own right and has generously donated the above oil to the auction.

One of Betty Parsons' exhibiting artists, Hedda Stern (now a Shelter Island resident) arrived in the US in1941, fleeing Hitler's Europe in a desperate search for freedom. Ms. Parsons has described Hedda Stern as "one of the most skillful draftsmen in [my] gallery, a sensitive and poetic painter. She is in many important collections." "Insects 1-1967," Ms. Stern's donation to the auction, is a work on paper.

Another contributor to the auction is Dan's Papers December 1st cover artist, Wendy Prellwitz, who spent summers in Peconic as a child and now spends time capturing the North Fork's flat and luminous landscape. Ms. Prellwitz' most recent show was at Corey Creek Vineyard in Southold featuring landscapes in oil.

There are a number of photographers also contributing to the benefit. Among them are Graham Glover of Cutchogue whose family roots reach all the way back to the first settlers; Mary Harte of Baiting Hollow who has traveled extensively in Ireland and Canada but finds that the "quiet charm" of Long Island still inspires her most and Steve Berger, whose contribution, "America #4 in Snow," a North Fork barn in a snowfall, is receiving quite a few bids.

Additional artists contributing works to the auction are Bob Markell, Alan Bull, Rich Fiedler, Margery Gosnell-Qua, Carol Halliburton, Richard Mizdal, Marianne Weil, Ellen Weiner, Deborah Whitney, Liza Cowan and Olinka Broadfoot.

Meet and mingle with the artists at an open house reception sponsored by the Long Island Wine Council at Castello di Borghese on Friday, April 20, from 5:30-7 p.m. Silent auction bids are being accepted now through April 30 at the vineyard.

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

THE NAME GAME

Remember the '50s catchy song called "The Name Game"? One took any name and twisted the syllables around to form another. It was a big hit. I still love listening to it when it's played on the 'oldies stations. There's another kind of name game, and it has been played for years by the automobile industry. It's a game where automobile manufacturers create what they believe are clever names that will sell their product. Many times the names are absurd.

What got me thinking about the absurdity of it all is that I just read that Buick is soon to produce an SUV called the "Rendezvous." In the SUV world of Ramchargers, Broncos, Discoverys, and Blazers, "Rendezvous" just doesn't work.

I can just see Billy Bob and Zeke dressed in full hunting regalia. As Billy Bob loads his 12 gauge, he looks at Zeke and asks, "What car we a takin' into the badlands?" "It's down and dirty out there, we'll need the 'Rendezvous'! Zeke answers gruffly, but with a French accent!!

There have been many other odd names in the car world. The British car company Humber produced a model called the Super Snipe. The made this model from 1949 untill 1967. They really must have liked that name. If nothing else, it was fun to say, and vedy, vedy British.

It has always amused me that the most prestigious car company in the world has always named its cars after ghosts. In 1906, the first Rolls Royce was introduced to the public at the Olympia Car show in London. Displayed in unpainted aluminum, it had an engine that was "silent as a sewing machine." It became known as the Silver Ghost. Over the years, Rolls has named most of its models with rather morbid monikers. The Silver Wraith, The Cloud, The Phantom, the Shadow, Spirit and Sereph. If they ever made a car for the Haitian market it would probably be called the Zombie. Didn't Bruce Willis drive a Rolls in Sixth Sense?

Oldsmobile, which sadly will soon be leaving the automotive area, once had Jetaway HydraMatic Drive. But at least in the '50s you could easily tell the difference between a Rocket 88 and a Rocket 98.

The same could be said of the Buick Roadmaster, which sadly was anything but a roadmaster. All American cars of that period handled terribly. Wallowing and mushing around every curve. Perhaps the Buick shoud have been called the Garagemaster!

The Willys Jeepster, built in '49, was very unique, but uncomfortable and underpowered. However, it did have a four cylinder engine with "Hurricane power". I can just imagine how slow it would have been with a normal engine producing only breeze power.

In those days Ford had a "Powerdome engine," Chevrolet had its "Blue-flame," "Thrift-King" motors (Chrysler) had its famous "Hemi-Head" and DeSoto its "Fire-dome 8." This was indeed the period of silly motor names.

Two names that work well are Thunderbird and Corvette. (Although I'll never understand why Chevrolet named their plastic hot-rod after a rather obscure navy fighting ship that excels at nothing.) The Thunderbird name works because it sounds cool, and keeps one wondering, what the hell is it? A flatulent robin?

By the way, have you noticed that the Germans have nothing to do with this name numbness? They simply put numbers on every car: 911, 5OOSEL, 325i. You see, you know exactly what car and model I've mentioned. Efficient and descriptive, yes. But oh-so-boring.

The Japanese are the new abusers of names. Like the song, "The Name Game," they actually make up new words. A Maxima, Corolla and Celica. These names are like the movie title Godzilla. They also use acronyms like mad. VTEC for instance. Give me a break, we finally outgrew the Cruise-O-Matic era, and now they're bombarding the world with automotive names and jargon that should have subtitles. Toyota even changed their name from Toyoda. Nissan was Datsun. Really made a difference!

Then we have a whole slew of new Korean cars. Their bizarre model names can actually make you believe that Japanese nomenclature makes sense. But please don't get me started!

Shop 'til You Drop...With Maria Tennariello

Now that the Easter Holiday is upon us, the kids are off from school and the weather is finally breaking. Which one of the above do you think I like the best? Let's shop!

I thought I would start out this week in Westhampton Beach, where little by little the shops are starting to awaken from their winter hibernation. Westhampton T-Shirts on Main Street is the place to find a great spring T-Shirt sale that includes heavy-weight hooded and crew neck cotton sweatshirts that originally sold for $30 to $50 that are now only $15. Also check out their pigment vintage dyed fabric washed T's and sweats. Bet you can't buy just one!

Spring has definitely sprung at Shock in Westhampton Beach. All the new merchandise is arriving daily from Paris and Los Angeles, all the new bright colors; vibrant pinks, oranges and turquoises are there already. Stop by for a fresh new look from head to toe, from a nice new updated outfit, cute summer sandals, and all the latest in handbags and accessories. I'm there!

While strolling down Main Street with the kiddies, stop by Baby Shock-Shock Kids for all your needs from layettes to sizes 14 for girls and boys. Shock Kids has everything from baby blankets, clothing, stuffed animals and toys. Baby Maxwell is right there in the window to wave to all the people strolling by. My Oh my, he's ten months old already. How time does fly. Look for the Easter Bunny on Saturday and Sunday April 14 and 15 from 12 to 2 p.m. Stop by and have your photo taken with him, bring your camera.

After your day of shopping walk right down the alley way to the Westhampton Beach Homemade Ice Cream Parlor where they have delicious homemade ice cream and ices. The new favorite ice cream for kids, pink or blue cotton candy, and Maxies frosty hot chocolate. Elyse told me that she is already scheduling birthday parities at the ice cream parlor that is right behind Shock Kids. Call 288-2522.

In Southampton on Main Street Complements Lingerie has had it's grand re-opening. Look for all brand new merchandise. Check out the Bridgehampton shop also on Main Street.

Also at Rose Jewelers on Main Street this is "Add-A-Pearl-Week". Starting April 9 through April 14, if you purchase three you will get the fourth one free. Or if you buy a beautiful starter necklace for $45.95 (regular $58) you can start a special tradition by adding to it for every special occasion. A pearl a day keeps the doctor away. Is that how it goes?

If you are looking for a whale of a sale, Flying Point Surf & Sport on Main Street in Southampton is having an inventory reduction sale. There is 50% off all clothing, pants, sweatshirts, shorts, footwear, T-shirts, bathing suits, dresses and jackets. There is 60% off the women's bathing suits also. Look for tons of new spring 2001 apparel (that is not included in the sale). Flying Point Surf & Sport also carries one of the largest selections of skateboards on the East End.

A spring sale already in progress is at Wendy's Fabric East located in Water Mill Plaza on Montauk Highway. The custom slipcovers and draperies, such as one couch up to 80 inches long with three cushions, was $495.95, now $300 and custom-made drapes that sold for $249 are now $159. Also blinds, vertical and minis, are 50% off.

Spring has also sprung on Main Street in East Hampton at Side Show. All new merchandise has really blossomed there.

There is also a spring paint sale going on at Golden Eagle on Gingerbread Lane in East Hampton. Get ready, get set, get paint and spruce up your home with some great pastels for the spring season.

Heading back to Sag Harbor I stopped off at The Ideal Stationary on Main Street for all my Easter cards and some great little stuffed animals for the kids. This is a must stop, must shop, shop. It is filled to the rafters with gift-wraps, office and art supplies, fine personal stationery, cards, gifts and much more. Also there is a fax machine and a UPS service here. Have fun!

Time to head home and get started cleaning, cooking, shopping (oops! did that already), because my entire family is coming to visit for Easter Sunday. As I ride through Sag Harbor, over the bridge and along Long Beach, I still think how lucky I am living in paradise.

Until next week. Happy Easter and Happy Spring Shopping!

SOMETIMES I LAY TOE TO TOE WITH THE WORLD

By Gabriel Rattiner

sometimes i lay,
toe to toe with the world.
watching, always watching, eyes wide, glaring, persuading, piercing eyes that follow and create lustering beautiful confusion in these eyes.
direction lost and hope undiscovered, i wait.
always waiting.
waiting emotionless in a world of no apex.
hoping to find, lose my lost and see through unconfused eyes.
but these eyes grow tired, hopeless and hidden lost in a mind of doubt, restoration is found.
eyes closed, and heart heavy i hear
i hear soft air
soft melodic air, rhythmic and quiet understanding, the air breathes with you.
and it's found, the hopelessness, the confusion, the emotion is lost
is swept away in a mighty blast of faith, a new, a real, a heaven is touched life is your hands, everything, absolutely everything is won with open eyes, you see nothing. but you do see, you see it all just not through these eyes.
the light wind fades, with a song and with heaven.
sometimes i lay
toe to toe with the world
eyes wide, hoping always hoping.

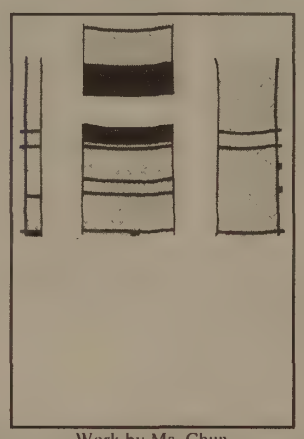
ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

SEONG CHUN AT SOUTHAMPTON COLLEGE

Curator Beth Giles has proved once again that a small gallery with a low profile within the confines of a university/college can be substantial, provocative and valuable.The reasons have nothing to do with the fact that the Avram Galléry is not a commercial enterprise. There are no mitigating circumstances when it comes to good taste and a good eye which is what this show and others before it have in common.



Work by Ms. Chun

There's also an attention to detail, a focus on material/medium and other formal matters that distinguishes these shows. And we can't forget variety. Ms. Giles always manages to offer conventional as well as conceptual exhibitions (although we'd like more of the latter, but not just at the Avram Gallery).

Seong Chun has obviously been influenced by Mondrian, and, in fact, that influence becomes the raison d'etre for her current work— self-reflexive pieces which comment on the artist and his writings as well as on Ms. Chun's interpretation.

The use of actual words to reinforce a creative endeavor is nothing new, as we have seen in work by some local painters or in mixed media pieces by conceptual artists. Oral communication seems a good element to combine with other art forms in our age of Postmodern hybrids. (Consider also choreographers who have been making spoken language a part of dance performance as well.)

However, Ms. Chun employs linguistics in a somewhat different way when she examines the "idea" of language, its grammar rather than literal words or vocabulary. At least, that's how this critic sees it – or doesn't see it as the case may be.

There are no words written on any of Ms. Chun's lovely woven paper pieces. No overt references or denotations. Just connotations. Each woven piece becomes a representation; it stands for something but is not the actual thing itself. A word (le parole) functions similarly.

For example, "Network" is a piece containing three separate parts, all connected by thin black threads. The work represents the idea of a network with interelational segments, like a prepositional clause. "Further/More" is another piece that conveys what the idea means: the piece is composed of individual parts but has an "open" structure where segments could be added like a simple sentence turning into a compound one with additional words.

The show will be on view at Southampton College's Avram Gallery until April 27.

Honoring the Artist: Lauren Jarrett

Art imitates life is an adage we've heard time and time again, yet it's still meaningful to people like Spring's resident, Lauren Jarrett. In Ms. Jarrett's case, her penchant for nature and particularly gardening provides the impetus for her art.

This week's cover of a single iris proves the point, the Iris occupying a special place in Ms. Jarrett's garden as a favorite flower. (Coincidently, the iris is also this critic's favorite who remembers, like Ms. Jarrett, the flower being an important part of a cherished childhood spent in her grandmother's garden.)

Ms. Jarrett's own childhood was memorable for other reasons: a grandfather who was an art director, painter and naturalist; a grandmother who was a gardener. "I tremendously value the time I had with them," Ms. Jarrett recalls. "I rememeber how extremely tidy my grandfather's studio was." (When asked if hers is as tidy now, she answers with a resounding, "Yes.")

Ms. Jarrett continues. "I also remember having a sense of the relative magic of art and nature. I guess I got that by osmosis. Tending the garden with my grandmother, collecting eggs from the chickens, milking the goats, all gave me a connection to the land. That's why I chose to live in East Hampton. Of course, twenty years ago, it was much more rural. But there's a quality of life that is quiet, seasonal. It's a very ideal existence here."

Ms. Jarrett not only paints what she sees from her garden, but she also stays connected with nature through her work with the Nature Conservancy. "We're trying to start an organic community garden," she explains. " One with garden plots, classes, and mentoring. We would especially welcome children; I'd like to recreate the time I spent with my own grandparents for other children."

Each year's onset of Spring and Summer provides new meaning for Ms. Jarrett's life and art. "Spring and Summer bring the same things to look at again or different things to examine. Each year brings its own detail. I particularly look for botanical detail in flowers as well as seashells."

Nature on the East End doesn't always serve as fertile ground, however. Ms. Jarrett often travels to other parts of the world to find inspiration: "I grew up in Connecticut but would spend a lot of time in Maine where I still go. The coastline is superb. I also lived in the French countryside for a season after graduating from the University of Connecticut, and I've been to Tuscany. I characterize myself as keeping my passport on my desk."

In the meantime, Ms. Jarrett continues to experiment, often combining an expressive mode with botanical accuracy. Her color palette has also gotten stronger. "I'm now doing works with multipaneled screens on plywood," she adds.

Whatever Ms. Jarrett is creating at the moment, however, she is well aware that all the aspects of her life, including her art, garden and freelance activities, relate to each other. "I wrap one aspect of my life around another," she says, "which go back to my childhood."

Guy de Fraumeni's HOLLYWOOD in The Hamptons

THE BROTHERS AND THE REAL HAMPTONS ?? STRIKE WHILE THE IRES COOL

EXTRA! The black-edged greetings from Hollywood continues to be the bloomin,' looming Writers Guild of America strike that could enshroud the movie industry with cobwebs. Of course, we know there's nothing "real" about those shows. They simply consist of non-professional actors without scripts. In most cases, they are competing for an audience by performing unusual and daring acts, not unlike those acrobatic, flying chimpanzee acts on the old Ed Sullivan Show. What do they do next to top the preceding ones? Maybe, as the recent flick,15 MINUTES warned, they might actually kill someone... on camera. Therefore, my theme this week [Warning: I'm a member of the W.G.A.], is the importance of a good script.

ABC PLANNING A REALITY MINISERIES HERE ON THE EAST END

The two-time documentary Oscar winner for Harlan County, USA, (1976) and American Dream (1990), Barbara Kopple appears close to a go-ahead to produce a "reality" show to be shot this summer in our fabulously renowned Hamp-toons. So... you could be on camera! That's it. I'll leave it at that. Just thought you'd like to know.

When a good script rears its educated head, we are happy to be reminded of some terrific scripts. Take THE BROTHERS, a romantic comedy. In spite of being cast from a familiar mold. . . it has gentle warmth, sensitivity, a feverish case of the smarts and down-to-earth, earthy sex... distinguishing it from trash like*TOM CATS*, a scatologically puerile, grossing-out copycat of other adolescent, toilet bowl back-ups.

TO THE VICTORS GO THE BOOTY

THE BROTHERS are not actually brothers. They are related in the African-American sense of the term . . . for they are black. Does this make it a :Black Movie"? Only in style and texture. Cultural differences only define mores and manners, just as in Terry McMillan's story of four black women, WAITING TO EXHALE.

The four colorful men of color in THE BROTHERS are professional men sliding ungracefully into their 30th year. They meet socially, mostly on a basketball court, where they skillfully toss about talk, tangy with jive-banter but, studded with honest, amusing-to-funny truths as perceptive as a microscope. You know that their send-ups and put-downs are attempts at emotional meaning . . . the sorting out of the tangled, electrically charged fuse box where love, sex, responsibility and fulfillment meet. One crossed wire and the power goes.

PLAYBOYS OF THE WESTERN WORLD (L.A.)

Here are the guys: Jackson is a doctor. He's attracted to women and they to him. They don't last but a week or so . . . so, he's seeing a shrink. Terry, the studied stud, has gotten engaged and he 's morbidly afraid of marriage! Brian, is a lawyer and loves being loved by white women. . . but, does he? So, sue him! Derrick is the married one. He has a daughter and a problem . . . his wife don't please him orally. This is a serious blow to the marriage. And, how about Jackson finding his girlfriend had dated his father!

Look! I warned you. The movie is earthy. It utilizes, to a great degree, all the four and five letter words and the three letter word (unless you spell ass with more than two s's . . . as it's pronounced in the film.) Look and be moved by some very tender family moments. This movie will not disrespect you.

"They Made The Movie Here" Film Festival 2001

Premiering Saturday April 21st at 2:00 p.m. at the Ross School Library Theatre 18 Goodfriend Drive (Off Route 114) East Hampton.

Hosted by Guy-Jean de Fraumeni and Sarah Halsey with special guests. Refreshments will be served and Admission is free.

Dan's Papers "Film Festival" celebrates movies made here on Long Island as "Hollywood East," and, by presenting films with their roots here in this water-edged, lively-arts, talent-populated community, we hope to promote more production.

The two films chosen to open the series represent the earliest days and the future of film making here. The films are BLOOD AND SAND, the 1922 Rudolph Valentino classic and DREAMING OF YOU, a half-hour feature as yet unreleased.

Blood and Sand is the historically dated (1922) film of the life and loves and glittery wardrobe of a Matador. However, it is convincingly fleshed out by Rudolph Valentino, who infuses the blood and, if not, the grit, the real zotz! into the production. The short feature, Dreaming of You, is a highly professional comedy/romance written and directed by Carlos Ferrer a 15-year old Southampton wonder.

Blood and Sand, Vincente Blasco Ibanez"s studied, romantic and heavily contrasted sol y sombra styled novel was deftly adapted for the screen by June Mathis who had written the screenplay for Ibanez's The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse (1921), the film that rode Valentino to stardom. Ms. Mathis had recommended him for that role to the formidable director, Rex Ingram, and Rudy came through for them, creating a different leading man . . . the Latin Lover, a sensitive, sensuous, swarthy Adonis . . . sleekly arrogant and yet vulnerable. The Sheik (1921) followed and firmly planted him in the tall saddle of Matinee Idol.

Blood and Sand, Dreaming of You

Unfortunately, under the limited direction of Fred Niblo, Blood and Sand's amorous dark shadows are brushed in simplistic strokes, giving the film a crude, too basic, black and white content. But, Valentino adds a subtle tonality of varying shades of romanticism, imparting a fuller and truer image. Remember, in those days, silent romance and drama was of a heavy, grasping-at-the-heaving breast type of emoting. But at least, then they grasped at their own breasts... not the women's.

Yes, you may find yourself guffawing when you are supposed to be gasping. especially in those scenes when the trampy Vamp, portrayed by a matronly looking Nita Naldi, pulls out every trick to seduce the up-tight (in skin-tight suits and shoes) Torero. However, the film as a whole holds up well. The bullfighting aspects and the moral theme that "prosperity and happiness cannot survive when built upon cruelty and bloodshed" are solid supports for the film's shaky old legs.

The story line itself has become a prototype for scads of novels and movies. The poor boy, with sweaty inspiration, succeeds to greatness, in spite of a kvetching mother so, he can shower her and his childhood sweetheart with this largess. Then a wicked, rich witch, who has everything except him, wants him. He succumbs . . . she proceeds to bust his chops . . . finally he sees the light through swollen eyes, and . . . no . . . I won't spoil the surprise. The story formula has been resuited for almost every profession, i.e., a prizefighter in Body and Soul (1947) pounded by John Garfield, a jazz trumpeter in Young Man With a Horn(1950) blown by Kirk Douglas. There's an opera star in Serenade (1956) scaled to new decibels by Mario Lanza, and many more including gangsters, a violinist, politicians and artists. The only thing left, I guess is a magnificent podiatrist.

Blood and Sand is an ambitious and successful movie despite the unimaginative director. As stated, June Mathis' script kept the big book's essence and she had suggested casting Valentino. And, another woman, Dorothy Arzner, who edited the film, devised the idea (new for the time) of using actual bullfighting footage into which she brilliantly inter cut close-ups of Valentino, perfectly matching the action. She personally directed the sequences to prove it would work . . . and it does. Having the real arenas and the documented action helps the film tremendously.

I guess it's true that women were Rudy's strongest supporters.

Young Carlos Ferrer's Dreaming of You, elegantly pictures a young man's dream girl . . . a somewhat older woman wise in the ways of the world and aggressive enough to take what she wants . . . and she wants the fellow behind the horn-rimmed glasses trying so hard to be suave.

Carlo is the man with a dream . . . just as in real life. He is currently working on Scallop Pond, a mystery to be shot in Southampton and New York City. And in the future, his first feature based on his grandparents lives enduring the Spanish Civil War. You can ask him about all this. He will be there Saturday. Call 537-0500 for reservations.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

Maria Tennariello, Dan's Papers "Shop 'til You Drop" guru, remembers how the days before Easter would proceed at her grandmother Michelina Di Rubbio's house. The baking that would begin on Good Friday included the rich aromas of pizza rustica, a thick, crusted Italian cheese and meat pie, grandmother's special rice pie in a sweet Marsala wine and butter crust and the traditional yeast bread, shaped into a circle with hard cooked eggs buried inside. Maria's mother Evelina (Di Rubbio) Corrente would continue the tradition.

Evelina, whose parents were from Isernia in the Province of Campobasso between Rome and Naples, grew up in the Sunset Park section of Brooklyn. She didn't learn to bake until after she was married. When the holidays came Evelina, one of four siblings, took turns with the family to bake her mother's specialties. Having two stoves, one in a basement kitchen, the baking was done quickly and efficiently. Maria's visual remembrance of her grandmother preparing home-made fettuccine, working her fingers into the dough and cutting the pasta into wide strips for the holiday, is charming.

Traditionally on Easter morning after church the Di Rubbio family welcomed relatives for a taste of the pizza rustica with a glass of wine and to wish everyone a Happy Easter. The festive meal for the family begins with chicken soup and tiny meatballs, along with grandma's treasured dishes, such as her sautéed chicken with "lots of garlic and rosemary," stuffed artichoke with grated cheese, garlic and breadcrumbs, and white button mushrooms packed with a thick egg, cheese and breadcrumb mixture. These foods are a powerful tribute to loving memories of grandma and a sweet remembrance of the family's heritage.

PIZZA RUSTICA

This recipe from Evelina Corrente makes two pies. She uses two 9-inch x 3-inch high spring-form pans to bake the pizza rustica.

For the pie crust
5 cups all purpose flour
6 eggs, beaten
3 tablespoons melted Crisco
1/2 cup water

For the filling
1 stick pepperoni
2 pounds Genoa salami
6 eggs, beaten
1/2 pound grating cheese, such as Romano
1 fresh basket cheese or pot cheese
1/2 teaspoon black pepper

The egg wash
2 egg yolks beaten with 2 teaspoons water

1. Place flour in a large mixing bowl and make a well in the center. Put in the eggs, the melted but cooled Crisco and stir to mix. Add as much water as needed to make soft dough. Knead until smooth and roll into a ball. Cut into 4 equal parts and wrap individually in plastic wrap. Allow the dough to rest for 45-60 minutes in the refrigerator. Roll out each piece to fit the pans. Reserve 2 pieces to roll out for the top of the pie.

2. Cut the meats into bite size pieces and put them in a mixing bowl. Add the beaten eggs, basket or pot cheese, grated cheese and pepper and stir to mix. Fold in the ricotta and mix thoroughly.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

3. Divide and pour mixture into the two piecrusts. Roll out the 2 reserved pieces of dough and place over the filling in each pan. Secure the edges. Brush tops with egg wash and bake for 45 minutes or until pie is firm.

STUFFED MUSHROOMS, ITALIAN STYLE

A delectable addition to the festive Easter dinner.

3 (10 ounce) containers of small white mushrooms
2 cups cubed white bread, crusts removed
1/4-1/3 cup unseasoned breadcrumbs
4 tablespoons grated Romano or Parmesan cheese
4 tablespoons finely chopped flat-leaf Italian parsley
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 1/2 sticks unsalted butter, melted
1/4 cup cold tap water
Olive oil to grease baking pan

1. Remove mushrooms stems and wipe mushroom caps clean with a damp paper towel.

2. In a large mixing bowl combine remaining ingredients and stir to mix until thoroughly combined. Fill each cap with the mixture mounding the top. Lightly grease a baking pan and place the stuffed mushrooms in the pan, one layer deep. Can be prepared ahead to this point. Refrigerate covered with plastic wrap if doing ahead.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

3. If mushrooms have been refrigerated, bring to room temperature before baking. Bake in preheated oven for 15-20 minutes. Serve hot.

EVELINA'S EASTER RICE PIE

This baked rice pudding in a sweet crust is typically served at the Di Rubbio family's Easter celebration. The crust can be easily prepared in the food processor.
Yield: 1 10-inch pie

For the crust
2 cups flour
Pinch salt
5 tablespoons unsalted butter
1 egg
1/4 cup sugar
1/3 cup chilled Marsala wine

For the filling
1 1/4 cups medium grain rice
1 tablespoon vanilla
3/4 cup sugar
1/2 cup container citron or 1/2 cup golden raisins
2 cups whole milk
5 egg yolks

1. For the dough place flour and salt in workbowl of food processor and pulse on and off for a few seconds to aerate. Cut butter in tablespoon pieces and add to the flour in workbowl. Process for a few seconds until mixture is a coarse crumb. Add egg and sugar and pulse for a few more seconds. Pour Marsala wine through feed tube of processor and process briefly, or just until the mixture comes together. Do not let it come to a ball or it may be tough. Turn out onto a lightly floured surface and knead two or three time then bring into a ball. Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate for at least one hour.

2. Place the dough between 2 squares of waxed paper to roll out. (The dough tends to be a little sticky.) Roll out to fit a 9 or 10-inch spring form pan across the bottom and up the sides. Reserve any scraps to make a criss-cross topping, this is optional. Place the dough-lined pan in the refrigerator for one-hour chill completely.

3. Meanwhile prepare the rice filling: Boil the rice in 2 1/2 cups cold water to cook until barely tender, about 15-18 minutes. Drain the rice and transfer to a mixing bowl. Add sugar, Crisco, vanilla and citron or raisins.

4. Scald the milk and when completely cool stir into the rice mixture. Then add the egg yolks and stir to mix thoroughly. Pour into the chilled dough-lined springform pan.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

5. Bake for 35-40 minutes, or until rice is set and lightly browned. Can be made up to several days ahead. Serve at room temperature.

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

Spring has arrived, or has it? Most of our farmers are anxiously awaiting some warm, dryer weather so they can get out in the fields. Most of us would think it has been wetter and colder than normal, but in reality we have seen spring weather like this before. The potato farmers are planting even though soil conditions are still quite wet. The greenhouse growers are in full swing hoping the weather straightens out so homeowners will start buying although it is still early for many bedding plants. After the long winter, it is nice to get outside and get started with yard work.

Over the last month my column had focused on my trip to Ukraine. Now, it is time to start talking about Farm Bureau issues of interest. We have had a very busy winter with events and meetings. As usual we had our Policy Execution Days in Albany. Eight of us went up on a Sunday. No one else except for representatives of Broome County made it to Albany. We were stuck in one of the largest snowstorms of the winter. The legislature was in session however. Senator Dean Skelos, Deputy Majority leader, said to us, "Who else but the farmers and the mailmen would make it to Albany?" So, we had a captive audience and were able to visit most of the L.I. delegation in the Assembly and Senate. Actually, New York Farm Bureau had to cancel the lobby days as well as the annual legislative reception as travel was too dangerous across the state. On Monday night the eight Long Island Farm Bureau member delegation had a power dinner with State Senator Ken LaValle, Senator Carl Marcellino, Senator Nancy Larraine Hoffmann (Senate Ag Chair), Senator Dale Volker, Assemblywoman Pat Acampora, Assemblyman Bill Magee (Assembly Ag Chair), Assemblyman Tom Barraga and several other guests. It was a lot of fun and good conversations. It was a great opportunity to talk about agriculture and politics in a social setting. We held the dinner at Ogdens, right below the LOB and Capital. It is one of the classiest restaurants in Albany – always great food.

Several days later we held the Annual LIFB Dinner Dance at Giorgio's. It is our organization's annual function whereby our farmers honor one of their own colleagues for dedication and service to agriculture and community. This year's honoree was Fred Hicks of Hicks Nursery in Woodbury. Fred has been involved in leadership positions with Cornell, Plant Growers Association, the National Nurserymen's Association as well as Farm Bureau. Fred Hicks is widely known in the Horticultural industry as a class act and runs a class business.

The most recent event for Farm Bureau was our annual lobby days in Washington, DC. LIFB President Howard Johnson, VP Henry Talmage, State Board Representative Ken Schmitt, myself and Associate Director Becky Wiseman invaded the halls of Congress! We had excellent visits with the LI Congressional delegation and staff. We had an opportunity to visit high level staff of the House and Senate Ag Committees as they are gearing up for the next farm bill debate. We visited the Director of the Senate Ag Committee, Keith Luse. He gave us the Senate's perspective on the next farm bill. We expressed our concerns particularly on the Conservation Title and Research Titles of the farm bill. Most commodity programs do not work well in the northeast States; however, conservation, farmland preservation, and research issues are very important to New York and the northeast.

The highlight of our visit to Washington was that Howard Johnson and I had a personal visit with freshman Senator Hillary Clinton. Mrs. Clinton is very interested in our issues so we had some time to talk with her on several priority issues (farmland preservation and estate taxes). We actually went to the Senate with her as she had to vote on one of the budget amendments. I think that Senator Clinton and Senator Schumer are going to do well for New Yorkers. Senator Schumer visited with the entire New York Farm Bureau group, including Long Island. Sen. Schumer has promised he will use all the power of his office to ensure New York agriculture's agenda is addressed in the farm bill. He is a tenacious individual and has earned high grades for his work thus far.

Washington DC is always an exciting city to visit. Some people are frustrated in how slow things change, but from my experience, you have to stay engaged in the democratic process or you will be left behind. Our farmer leaders take on the role of advocate very seriously. No one is going to tell their story better than the farmers themselves. I am proud of the respect they have brought to Long Island Farm Bureau and our citizens.

Color And Continuity In Mixed Borders

Mixed borders are a great idea to improve any landscaping. A combination of trees, shrubs, flowers, vines, and ground covers can bring year-round interest to your garden. Dense interplanting allows a constant flow of colors as the seasons roll by. In winter, the woody backbone frames evergreens hidden during lusher seasons. In spring several evergreen shrubs, such as Andromeda Japonica, joined by spring bulbs such as crocuses, daffodils, and tulips; early perennials, such as creeping phlox and certain deciduous shrubs, such as forsythia, will bloom. In summer, shrubs have leafed out, and many early and late bloomers now act as foliage plants. Warm weather brings on the annuals as well as midseason contributors, including floral shrubs, such as hypericum and spiraea, numerous perennials, bulbs, vines, and ground covers. Autumn's potent color bathes the late season borders in a last gasp of beauty. Shrubs, such as euonymus (burning bush), perennials, such as asters and rudbeckias, annuals, such as chrysanthemums, are quiet for much of the year, but show their color and beauty during this season.

When planning mixed borders for my clients, I begin by siting any trees we plan to use. Before planting any tree, always learn how large it will likely become with age. More than any other element, trees focus the garden and give it a sense of performance. Trees will shape the flow and placement of other plants as well as garden structures such as bird baths, benches, or sundials. Trees in mixed borders are almost always the dominant features. Deciduous trees can have a powerful presence all year long, especially when they have been selected for winter features like structural grace and handsome bark, such as birch trees. Evergreen trees can be incorporated in the perimeter plantings which give the garden its form. Trees give a garden character, privacy and provide shelter for the smaller plants.

Shrubs are the magical element, which unite the mixed border, relating trees to perennials, vines to ground covers and bulbs. The introduction of shrubs into the border means that there will be wonderful niches to be filled with choice of perennials, bulbs, annuals, ornamental vines, and effective visual connections established between tall trees and garden plantings. Evergreen shrubs, such as junipers or boxwoods, have been used more frequently to give structure or to edge mixed borders and also to bring a winter accent to it. Evergreen shrubs should be selected in a diverse range of shapes, sizes, textures, and green hues to avoid monotony. With a year round backbone of shrubs in place, the remaining spaces can be filled with exciting seasonal colors.

Perennial and annual flowers are the life of the border. Chosen with an eye to continuity and sequencing, flowers will pour through mixed borders in waves and washes of color from the first moment of spring until winter. The mixed border offers numerous spaces in which flowers may be tucked. Flowers of all species bring mixed borders to life. They should be arranged by height, color, and texture, or mixed to bring some romantic English disorder into the border. Flowers are most rewarding when their various forms are alternated or arranged in visually intriguing ways. I always encourage planting them in drifts so the visual impact of plants will be increased. Planting them in mass will offer beautiful views of color and shapes and will read well from the house. Perennials, annuals, vines, bulbs, and ground covers can offer far more than flowers and when attention is given to contrasts of foliage, form, color, and texture combinations remain attractive with or without flowers. In year-round mixed borders, all kinds of flowers should be used. Perennials stand alone, but are placed along with bulbs, vines, annuals, and so forth, all of which share seasonal strengths. Mutually supportive plants are given compatible companions, and placed so that their strong points are emphasized and their weaknesses hidden.

Ornamental grasses, with their long season of good looks and an exceptional range of colors, shapes, and textures, can be superb border accents. I place them to balance and center the mixed border, using different varieties in different heights combining them with perennials such as sedum "Autumn joy," perovskia, or annuals, such as verbena bonariensis. Ornamental grasses also help to distract the rigid shape of some trees, shrubs, and hedges giving an unexpected flow and movement to the entire mixed border, which also can promote the visit of wildlife, such as birds and butterflies.

However, there is no one pattern for making mixed borders and in practice they vary enormously, reflecting the diversity and interests of each one. Mixed borders can be formal in design and planting style, where spring bulbs and bedding annuals are ranked in symmetrical echoing patterns and every bed is neatly outlined in clipped boxwood hedges. They may be free-flowing in form and naturalistic in planting. They may be formally laid out, yet have their rigid geometrical lines softened by generous planting. Mixed borders can be made to suit any site or style of architecture and we from Unlimited Earth Care will be happy to help you with the design, layout, and installation of your mixed border.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

About Face: Men Are Beauties, Too

I think men, mostly older men, just wash their faces with whatever is planted in the shower. Whether that be deodorant body soap or the baby's soap. They don't seem too concerned about their skin as we women are. But they should be. And perhaps more so. Men who work outdoors are exposed to the harsh elements like the sun, wind and rain. There is a great skin care line for men that you guys ought to get excited about.

They are ANTHONY LOGICS FOR MEN. Their line encompasses a skin, bath and body care regime. ANTHONY'S consists of 26 products, tailored for men, in the four core areas of the hair, face, shave and body. The Shave Gel ($14) comes in a convenient tube that can be stored in the shower without worrying about rusting the tiles. Gone is the shaving cream can of yesterday. It contains Aloe beads to soothe the skin, Glycerin for lubrication, Sea Kelp to prevent inflammation, and finally Slippery Elm, which soothes. All the makings of a luxury shave, huh guys? The fragrance is wonderful. They also carry a Glycerin soap ($8) bar that is in a citrus scent. It too is loaded with Aloe Vera and also includes Orange Extract for exfoliating and as an added bonus, Botanical Extracts to further soothing and healing.

Women will love to lure this away from their man. A great beach carry must-have is their Sport Stick with an SPF of 15 for eyes and lips. It comes in a nicely sized tube and it contains vitamins A, E and D to help nourish the lips and Chamomile for smoothing. Included in the line are Toners, Moisturizers, Facial Scrubs, Masks, Shampoo, Conditioners, Styling creams and gels, a wonderful array of bath and body items, and a deodorant. There IS an Anthony, he is Anthony Sosnick, creator of the line.

Education is the pillar of this company, and that is

Odd visitors entered a Wainscott home, as its owners discovered when they found two small piles of feces, apparently from a small animal, within the house. An unwrapped but unused bar of dial soap was also discovered, which was probably not used by any feral visitors. A curtain on the rear door had also been moved.

* * *

A volunteer for Meals on Wheels arrived at a house he normally delivered to and found two individuals outside. He asked them to bring the meal inside. The volunteer then proceeded to feed the stray cats in the vicinity of the house, as he often did. When he returned to his car he found a bag that had contained $400, his drivers license and social security cards. By the time the volunteer had discovered this, the individuals outside the house had left. When confronted later, they denied any knowledge of the theft.

* * *

If you see anyone wearing a red shirt with pearls around the collar it is likely to be the apparel stolen from an Amagansett house. The owner told police that the house had been shown by several real estate agencies.

* * *

A man working on his car outside the Sea Crest Motel in East Hampton took off his $2,300 Baume Mercier watch and placed it on the front seat as two Good Samaritans helped him in his endeavors. The watch disappeared. The owner of the purloined watch asked the individuals if they knew anything of the matter. They said, No.

* * *

And speaking of missing shirts. A security guard at TJ Maxx in Bridgehampton told police a man left the store with two shirts, valued about $60, and $3 of Easter Candy.

Dan's LETTERS

FAR OFF BUT NOT FORGOTTEN
Hi Maria,

I think you'll remember me and my stores in East Hampton and Sag Harbor. I've been reading Dan's Papers and your Shop 'til You Drop column online since I am now in California. You are making me miss the Hamptons!

I wanted to let you know that I now have my own website and that my old customers from the Hamptons have been finding me, sending email, and I'm still making great hats for them. Please check my site, www.TheHatBox.com or www.pauladelpercio.com. I thought maybe you could do a story in your column as we are coming up on Easter and Mother's Day. I am planning on running ads in your paper for this summer season.

Let me know what you think of the website and if you'd like first scoop. My customers are looking for me...I know you can help.

Keep up the good work...I've been reading "Luxuries" too. Hope to hear from you.

HISTORY LESSON
Dear Dan,

You are unarguably an authority on Hamptoniana; however, your knowledge of European history is hardly comparable. To wit, the errors in your piece on Venice (March 16):

1. You write that around 500A.D. Venice "asked to be taken in under the protection of Byzantium, the Holy Roman Empire."

Not only did the HRE have nothing to do with Byzantium, it didn't even exist until 962 when a German king, OTTO I, was coronated. Otto's state was a successor to one established by the Frankish (German) Charlemagne. The core of Charlemagne's empire consisted of various German principalities, plus Austria, Bohemia and Moravia.

2. The doge was not a "religious leader" but the head of the Republic of Venice.

3. It was not the Third, but the Fourth Crusade (1202-1204) that turned from Jerusalem to the capital of the unimaginably wealthy East Roman (aka Byzantine) Empire.

4. The capital was Constantinople (formerly Byzantiumn), named after the Roman Emperor Constantine I (the Great), who had moved the seat of Rome there in 330. The city was also known as New Rome.

Until the death of Theodosios I in 395, East and West Rome were united. The last ruler in the West was Romulus Augustulus, whom the Goths deposed in 476, the date commonly accepted as the end of the Roman Empire in the west. East Rome, however, lasted another 1000 years.

5. The sacking of Constantinople was hardly a "victory for Christendom." Nor did the Crusaders believe such nonsense, for Christianity had been recognized in 313 and had become in essence the state religion.

Nor was the sacking "revenge for the days when the Holy Roman Empire ruled Venice." (See 1 above.) But it was a victory for the forces of greed. Under the leadership of the nonagenarian Enrico Dandolo the Venetians and the Crusaders had agreed to split the fabulous spoils. AND THEY DID.
